Vacation anyone?

The last 15-16 months have been interesting to say the least. We all know someone who has been struggling with burnout or general fatigue. If you are on the fence about taking a vacation, you may take some comfort in knowing that leisure travel has finally returned to pre-pandemic levels. While there are still challenges associated with travelling internationally, domestic air travel is pretty much back to normal. Even cruise ships are starting to sail again! Depending on where you want to go, great deals can be had. Before booking something, you may want check out the interactive map on international travel restrictions, you can find it here. If you plan on heading somewhere awesome in the next couple of months, we always love seeing pics of where our clients have been. The best part about financial planning is helping clients figure out how to spend the money they have worked so hard to save! Happy and safe travels everyone!

Tax Filing Deadline

If you filed an extension this year, you need to remember that October 15th is your final day to file your personal income tax return for calendar year 2020. The IRS is extremely backed up, and turnaround times have generally been poor, especially for individuals with complicated returns. Don't wait until the last second. Please note: September 15th is the extended deadline for calendar-year partnerships and multiple-member LLCs who file Form 1065 for their business. It's also the S corporation business tax extension deadline (for the business' return, not the owners).
